GOVERNING GLOBAL HEALTH @WHA70

PUBLIC EVENT

TUESDAY, 23 MAY 2017

13:30 – 15:00

MAISON DE LA PAIX, PETAL 2, AUDITORIUM

What does it mean for countries and organisations?

Changes in the global political landscape threaten to dramatically impact global health priorities despite the commonly agreed 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. This increases the pressure on governments to raise their domestic funding levels and build resilient and sustainable health systems. Innovative financing mechanisms, such as earmarked taxes, solidarity levies, private sector contributions, buy-downs, and financing facilities are also being discussed throughout the health sector as alternative means to sustain the provision of critical health services. These different ways of health financing and investments for health have implications for the way in which the global health domain is governed, both at the national and global levels.

This event therefore aims to explore:

- the impact of the changing global political context on the financing streams of development actors and its consequences on receiving countries;
- new approaches and mechanisms to sustainably finance health systems ; and
- the challenges inherent in transitioning towards domestic financing models and its impact on governance for health at the global and national levels.
