BACKGROUND AND MISSION

FIND, an independent non-profit Swiss foundation, was established in 2003 in Geneva, Switzerland. FIND's mission is to drive the development and implementation of accurate and affordable diagnostic tests for infectious diseases, including tuberculosis, malaria, hepatitis C, neglected tropical diseases such as sleeping sickness, leishmaniasis, Buruli ulcer and Chagas disease, and diseases with outbreak potential, such as Ebola or Zika. The key goal of the organisation is to provide diagnostic tests that are affordable, accessible and practical in various developing country settings.

HEALTH-RELATED ACTIVITIES

FIND supports the development of products in the diagnostics pipeline through public-private partnerships with collaborators from industry, academia and the international health community, as well as governments of affected countries. FIND serves as an expert project manager that brings together all the entities involved in developing effective diagnostic solutions and introducing these novel technologies into health systems of high-burden countries. FIND identifies potential breakthroughs and builds effective partnerships designed to overcome complex challenges and ensure successful access to new tools for infectious diseases. By fostering a continuous process of improvement, FIND does not stop at product development, but accompanies technologies through evaluation and demonstration into clinical use to ensure health impact and a constant flow of feedback from users to improve next-generation diagnostics. FIND is coordinating itself with other relevant stakeholders, as it happened in February 2019, with a conference on "Accelerating Innovation and Access in Global Health Technologies".

GOVERNANCE AND STAFF

FIND is governed by a board of directors headed by Mark Kessel. The CEO of the organisation is Dr Catharina Boehme. FIND is headquartered in Geneva and has offices in Cape Town, New Delhi, Kampala and Hanoi.
