Territorial Disputes in International Law

Despite globalisation and the increasingly transnational character of human activities, territorial disputes remain a significant source of tensions in international relations and constitute a large share of inter-state cases brought before international tribunals and courts. This handbook, edited by Marcelo Kohen and Mamadou Hébié, analyses the concepts, technical rules, and norms applicable to territorial dispute.

PAPER

Mobilizing International Law in the Palestinian Struggle for Justice

This introduction by CCDP Research Associate Alaa Tartir with George Bisharat, Jeff Handmaker and Ghada Karmi to a special issue of Global Jurist (July 2018) on "International Law and the State of Israel" states that while we cannot afford to neglect law in envisioning alternative futures in Israel/Palestine (including statehood), justice always remains a guide.

Globalisation and Conflict: Evidence from Sub-Saharan Africa

While it is widely believed that conflict is rife in sub-Saharan Africa, the processes that come with globalisation actually play a beneficial role in reducing conflict. So argues Carolyn Chisadza, coauthor of this article in the Institute's journal International Development Policy (October 2018).

Antagonistic Recursivities and Successive Cover-ups: The Case of Private Nuclear Proliferation

The article by Grégoire Mallard (in The British Journal of Sociology, October 2018) shows how "antagonistic recursivities" worked in the case of the global fight against private nuclear proliferators after the 2003 revelations about the reach of the A. Q. Khan network.

PHD THESIS

Human Rights and State-Owned Entities

How is the state ownership of companies regulated in international law? What are the main limitations and opportunities inherent in each system of regulation, as far as human rights are concerned?

Mihaela Barnes sheds light on these understudied questions and makes suggestions that could be useful to legislators, regulators and academics.

The Politics of Overlapping Organizations: Hostage-Taking, Forum-Shopping and Brokering

This paper by Stephanie Hofmann (in Journal of European Public Policy, August 2018) contributes to theory development about the politics of overlapping organisations. Taking the EU-NATO overlap as an example, it explains how organisational overlap can affect the execution of organisational mandates.

PHD THESIS

Congo: A State Ecosystem

The “postcolonial African state” is still generally seen through the lens of state failure and fragility within IR. Stéphanie Perazzone presents alternative narratives, arguing that patterns of state formation in the Congo and elsewhere remain surprisingly strong precisely as “the state” continues to be institutionally weakened, conceptually ambiguous, and always contested.

Farming for Freedom: The Shackled Palestinian Agricultural Sector

CCDP Research Associate Alaa Tartir provides an overview of the Palestinian agricultural sector and discusses the impact of the Israeli occupation, focusing on the distortion and deterioration of Palestinian agriculture (in Crisis and Conflict in the Agriculture, ed. by R. Zurayk, E. Woertz and R. Bahn, CAB International, October 2018).

Nicaragua: sandinismo 2.0?

Ce dossier des Cahiers des Amériques latines, co-édité par et avec une introduction de Dennis Rodgers et Maya Collombon, décortique les dessous de la rhétorique de gauche du régime actuel et en explore les différentes sources d'opposition internes. Il dévoile ainsi la matrice d'un sandinisme version «2.0», c'est-à-dire un agenda économique foncièrement néolibéral.

Agrarian Transition, Adaptation and Contained Conflict in Cambodia and Vietnam since the Nineties

In his contribution to Crisis and Conflict in the Agriculture (ed. by R. Zurayk, E. Woertz and R. Bahn, CAB International, October 2018), Christophe Gironde explores the evolution of crisis and protest in agricultural and rural communities. He concludes that Cambodia and Vietnam's failure to experiment outright agrarian conflict reflects a shift in dialectic from crisis-conflict to transition-adaptation.

Truth, Silence and Violence in Emerging States

In the 20th century, political violence in emerging states gave rise to different kinds of silence within their societies.
