Director's statement/ Declaración del director:

ENG:

Commemorating the 150th anniversary of the Institute of International Law, our documentary, 'Justitia & Pace,' delves into the rich history and enduring legacy of this prestigious institution. Established in 1873 with the noble mission of promoting international law and peaceful dispute resolution, the Institute has left an indelible mark on the world stage. From its distinguished receipt of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1904 to its ongoing dedication to strengthening the normative framework in our complex global society, this film offers a comprehensive journey through time.

Our cinematic work is supported by a valuable historical archive, unveiling the pivotal moments that have shaped the Institute's journey. Moreover, we have had the privilege of conducting unique interviews with prominent members who have played a key role in times of peace and crisis. These individuals remain committed to the cause, ensuring the Institute's relevance over time.

The Institute's biennial gatherings and scientific commissions serve as a cornerstone for the development of international law. Their Resolutions, often of a normative character, are brought to the attention of governmental authorities, international organizations, and the scientific community, emphasizing the importance of the lex lata and advocating for its respect.

The film not only pays homage to the Institute's historical achievements but also highlights its contemporary significance. In an increasingly interconnected world, the Institute's commitment to peace, justice, and international law is more vital than ever. 'Justitia & Pace' is a tribute to the enduring vision of the Institute of International Law and its unwavering mission to ensure a more just and peaceful world.
