

Jafar Hassan | Classes of 1993, 1998 & 2000

A distinguished Jordanian statesman, Jafar Hassan has dedicated over three decades to advancing Jordan's diplomatic and economic policies on both national and international stages. Appointed Prime Minister of Jordan in 2024, he leverages extensive experience gained from key roles, including Minister of Planning and International Cooperation, Deputy Prime Minister for Economic Affairs, and Chief of Staff to King Abdullah II. Known for his strategic vision and commitment to economic reform, Jafar Hassan has played a pivotal role in strengthening Jordan's global partnerships and enhancing its economic resilience. A technocrat, his contributions reflect a faithful dedication to sustainable development and regional cooperation, solidifying his legacy as a pivotal key figure in Jordanian history.

© Prime Ministry.

As Minister of Planning and International Cooperation (2009–2013), Jafar Hassan worked tirelessly to secure vital international support. His efforts were pivotal in addressing complex regional challenges, including managing an unprecedented influx of Syrian refugees.

© Royal Hashemite Court.

In September 2024, Jafar Hassan was appointed as Jordan's new Prime Minister by His Majesty King Abdullah II, marking a milestone in a distinguished career spanning over 30 years in public service.

© Prime Ministry.

Jafar Hassan's dedication to local development shines through his active fieldwork. He believes that combining high-level strategies with grassroots interventions is essential to ensure no one is left behind — a principle that drives his outreach activities daily.

