

Kamel Morjane | Class of 1976

Kamel Morjane, a Tunisian statesman and diplomat, made a notable mark on both national and international governance. As Minister of Defense, Foreign Affairs, and Public Service, he played key roles in shaping Tunisia's political landscape. His illustrious career spans decades of diplomatic service, including pivotal leadership at the United Nations, where he contributed to peacekeeping efforts in the Democratic Republic of Congo and advocated for refugee rights globally. Throughout his career, Kamel Morjane navigated complex global and national challenges with wisdom, resilience, and a deep-seated belief in diplomacy's power to foster lasting change.

© UN Photo / Eskinder Debebe.

Kamel Morjane, Special Representative of the Secretary-General for the Democratic Republic of Congo, and fellow alumnus Secretary-General Kofi Annan met during a visit to Geneva in 2000. Both leaders shared a commitment to international cooperation and humanitarian initiatives.

© Keystone / AFPI / Georges Gobet.

Kamel Morjane, Assistant High Commissioner for the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), is pictured speaking with West African children on December 14, 2002, in a safehouse operated by the International Organization for Migration in a district of Abidjan, where several West African families were sheltered by UNHCR.

© UN Photo / Eskinder Debebe.

During his illustrious career as both a national and international diplomat, Kamel Morjane met with fellow dignitaries. Then Minister for Foreign Affairs of Tunisia, he is pictured with former President of the Swiss Confederation Joseph Deiss, at the time President of the sixty-fifth session of the General Assembly, in 2010.

