

Roland Dominicé | Class of 1998

Roland Dominicé is a leading Swiss entrepreneur in impact investing and development finance. In 2005, he founded Symbiotics, the Geneva-based investment firm specialising in impact investing and microfinance. He was part of the founding teams at BlueOrchard, Symbiotics, and Tameo: three companies that have shaped the field over the past two decades. Throughout his career, he has shown deep commitment to sustainable development and linking finance to impact.

© David Huc / Magazine Bilan.

Since 2005, Symbiotics has originated over USD 12 billion in private investments to 650 companies in 90 emerging markets. Roland Dominicé led the firm's management team for more than two decades, driving its growth from a startup into a global leader in impact investment solutions.

© UNCTAD / Violaine Martin.

Roland Dominicé delivered a speech on the implementation of Sustainable Development Goals in private investments funds during the 2018 United Nations for Trade and Development (UNCTAD) World Investment Forum.

© European Microfinance Platform.

In his early career, Roland Dominicé worked in asset management for UBS Switzerland, and in management consulting for PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC) in Geneva.

Learn more here